NATIONAL & INTERNATIONAL NEWS

◆ Boston Marathon bombing suspect Dzhokhar Tsarnaev, faces a 15-count state indictment related to the death of a police officer and a police shootout. That's in addition to a 30-count federal indictment returned recently by a federal grand jury.

◆ Former South African President Nelson Mandela remains critical but stable and his health improved overnight. One of his daughters said he is still opening his eyes and reacting to the touch of his family even though his situation is precarious.

◆ Interest rates on new student loans are going to double, at least for a while, as a compromise proved unwinnable before Monday's deadline. None of the proposals being circulated among lawmakers could win passage, according to Sen. Tom Harkin. Harkin said his colleagues could retroactively lower the rates when they return from the Fourth of July holiday.

◆ Next year, high-calorie sports drinks and candy bars will be removed from school vending machines and cafeteria lines and will be replaced with diet drinks, granola bars and other healthier items. The Agriculture Department stated that it will make sure that all foods sold in the nation's 100,000 schools are healthier, which includes snacks sold around the school and foods on the "a la carte" line in cafeterias.
