Local & State News

◆ THE "HEAT WAVE" IS COMING FRIDAY

Lovers of bluegrass music from all over will be coming to Athens this weekend for the Heatwave Bluegrass Festival at the Athens Regional Park. The festival opens Friday and goes through Sunday. The headlining act will be Dailey & Vincent (shown below). Other acts to perform include The Box Cars, Blue Highway, Mountain Heart, Blue Moon Rising, and Ashley Campbell (Glen's daughter). Sunday's show features Gospel Bluegrass. The festival will also feature artist and songwriting workshops and the "Got the Grits" competition for instrumentalists. Tickets for all three days are $50 per person. ($40 per person for the first 500 tickets sold) To purchase tickets, see ad on Page 2.

NATIONAL-WORLD NEWS

◆ Dallas police applications have tripled after five local law enforcement officers were killed in the line of duty by a gunman who said he was angry with police. The July 7th attack was the deadliest event for law enforcement since Sept. 11th. But it doesn't seem to have deterred people from joining the force.

◆ A small plane recently crashed into a house in Haddam, Connecticut, spiraling out of control and diving through the roof of Norman Hannenbaum's home. The plane landed just feet from where he was sitting inside the house.

◆ Protests against the Democratic National Committee and Hillary Clinton continued for a second straight day on the streets of Philadelphia. The protests stemmed from marijuana legalization activists, immigration rights activists, socialists, Green Party supporters, and Black Lives Matter activists, who were unified in their opposition to Clinton and the DNC.

◆ COMMUNITY NEWS YOU CAN USE:

Learning About the Hiwassee

Jim Ogden, National Parks Service historian (pictured in front of pontoon on right) described the significant role of the Hiwassee River in the history of southeast Tennessee with special emphasis on the Civil War. The lecture was part of the Three Star Tour sponsored by the Tennessee Civil War Preservation Association. Thirty people took part in this past Saturday's event, which included historic places in Charleston, as well as 11 miles on the Hiwassee River in pontoon boats provided by volunteers.
