Knowles to Step Down As TWU President

Dr. Harley Knowles has announced plans to step down as president of Tennessee Wesleyan University on June 30th, 2022. Dr. Knowles has served as president for the past 11 years. He says he is proud of the progress the school has made on a number of fronts, but also believes now is a good time to transition to a new president. Under his leadership, the University has seen the creation of graduate level programs in business, education, and allied health, establishment of undergraduate programs in communication studies, and degree completion programs in business, nursing, and criminal justice. The school has also transitioned from College to Tennessee Wesleyan University. The Collums Campus Center was constructed and there have been two years of record enrollment. The Board of Trustees will now begin the search for the next president. Dr. Larry Wallace, who served as the Senior Vice President at TWU when Dr. Knowles was hired, said Knowles was absolutely the right person at the right time in his life and the life of Tennessee Wesleyan to be president.
